Review for French Packet

Our political chapter.

President Mitre nominated, B. Aires federalized, New Government, Close of Congress, Parana Bonds confirmed, The provinces quiet, New projects, Immigration, Our foreign relations.

On Sunday last [6th inst.] the scrutiny of votes for the Presidency took place at the Senate-house, in presence of a large multitude, and the electoral returns of 13 provinces were published, Catamarca not having sent in any list. The aggregate of votes was 132 and General Mitre was unanimously elected President of the Argentine Republic. For Vice President there were no less than nine candidates, but Don Marcos Paz was returned by an immense majority, 91 votes, his next competitor General Taboada having only 16. Dr. Alsina, Pres. of Senate, formally proclaimed the result, and to-day [12th] the new rulers are to be solemnly installed.

Since yesterday this city has become the residence of the National authorities, all the former provincial departments and officers being elevated to the category of Federal, and the metropolis placed under the exclusive jurisdiction of the Pres. and Congress. The anti-capitalists still betray an ill-disguised jealousy to the new arrangement, and, far from cooperating in the action of the National city, seek to create a rivalry of power, in the provincial Legislature. In the general Assembly on Friday evening, the Chambers of Buenos Aires considered the resignation of Governor Mitre, and appointed the 15th inst. for the nomination of his successor. Great agitation prevailed, the members being almost evenly divided: those in the minority charged their opponents with violating the Constitution, [which ordains the President of State shall be temporary Gov. until next May,] and General Emilio Mitre with some others abandoned their seats, as a protest against the proceeding. If a new Governor be elected, the choice will probably fall on Sor. Riestra, and although his jurisdiction will be "extra muros", he will find himself in some manner, placed in hostility with the National Cabinet.

The session of Congress should have terminated on the 1st inst but President Mitre prolonged the term 20 days, to give room for deliberating various important measures which could not well be delayed till next year. In the remaining week, we expect, our legislators will exert themselves to conclude all questions pending and the march of the Executive during the recess, will be unimpeded and clearly defined. The next session will begin in May 63, by which time the Republic will have made great progress in the establishment of order, and development of industry.

The Parana Bonds have undergone singular vicissitudes since last packet; having been at one moment, with only one dissentient voice, by the national Senate, they were a subject of violent debate in the Deputies, where all the Buenos Aireans members insisted on opening up the original transactions of the Parana loan, plainly saying the sacred name are of a consolidated debt. The native press even presumed to call the Parana bonds infamous, and wished to appeal for some vague items of a floating debt, which come to us almost without a voucher. On first reading the bill of the Senate was passed in the lower house, but the second reading was thrown out by 26—Nays to 17 Ayes. It was then sent back to the Senate who, in obedience to the demands of foreign holders, and in honor of their national credit, insisted on their former sentence, notwithstanding the vigorous hostility of Dr. Elizalde, who changed sides and now combatted the project as enormously as he had before supported it. The opposition not mustering 2 thirds of the Deputies, the Parana Bonds are virtually confirmed and the covert repudiation we fear has melted into nothingness, for to an outburst of honest indignation on the part of Gov. and the vice president elect.

In the interim, every thing is in perfect peace and quietness. Several of the provinces have large sums at stake in the Parana bonds, and any pretence to enquire, or repudiate might have caused serious danger to our tranquility. The alarm about Rioja and Catamarca was ill-founded: in the former province Gen. Peñaloza is living quite privately on his estancia, little thinking of "camps d'asile," and in the latter the Aimaraz party has borne, with resignation, its downfall. The citizens of Aconquija have not yet made up their minds where they will have their capital, and Gov. Sarmiento has been so forbearing as to give them no service. The silver mines are said to go on well, and we have been favored with a sample of the ore which seems to have a large alloy of lead. Santa Fé is in a despotic condition, the camps are almost deserted, every weapon heavily on all, and bands of roving gauchos commit horrible ravages in open daylight: even the old city itself is threatened with destruction from the river, and Congress has voted $30,000 to protect it from being utterly sapped and mined.

The one order of things is producing happy effects; already flowing supplies of the utmost confidence, and our industrial review will shew how material and tangible are the benefits derived from capitalization. Our credit now stands high on the London Exchange; new railways, banks, and lines of packet ships are in formation: thousands of immigrants arrive monthly, and yet, we want more hands. We are at peace with every body and with ourselves. Such is the glowing picture of the Argentine republic on the auspicious day when President Mitre assumes the reins of power. May no prospects be yet more brilliant when his term of office shall have drawn to a close!

Industrial and financial Review.

The vote of the Senate on the National debt question last thursday has relieved us of the pain of duty of reviewing the industry and commerce of a country in a state of revolution and disorder. We have watched with the most exquisite anxiety, the efforts of all, to ruin the credit of the Republic! Their utter confusion and total defeat, is the best proof of the strength of our funds at home, that the Argentine Republic is safe in the hands of those who are at present its rulers.

The interior provinces, which have suffered so miserably during the civil wars, are beginning to shew signs of vitality: the respective Governors of these Provinces are vying with each other in their efforts to promote their country, foster agricultural and introduce immigration. Possessed of such immense resources, of a fertility unequalled in any part of the known world, and of a climate capable of carrying on production in the shortest space of time, the Argentine Republic must necessarily become one of the most important countries in the world. Such being a fact, capitalists from all parts of the world are looking with anxiety to the Argentine Republic as the most favorable field for investment.

But if we have to lament the present poverty and gloomy future of the subaltern business, we have, on the other hand, the pleasure to announce that another and far more valuable staple is springing up amongst us as a staple which has already built up more than one country, within the memory of the present generation, and which, if properly attended to, may raise the Argentine Republic to the place amongst nations which her natural resources have evidently destined her.

Cotton is no longer a mere visionary scheme, but, we are proud to say, a reality in the River Plate. In this packet we send to the "Cotton Supply Association" samples of a lot from Corrientes, which if the owner assures us will probably amount to one thousand pounds, or two arrobas. Small though it is as an export, yet we hail as the harbinger of a bright future. The seed which we sent last through the Republic, we hear from all quarters, is coming up, and men are willing to believe now that Cotton will grow in the new countries, if people are willing to sow it.

In a few years thereon can have land sent into this cheap place, and by a skilful cultivation it became our choice—it is now unattainable, and our principal wish is that the future destiny of this country is wrapt up in the solution of this Cotton question, and I assure our subscribers I have said they have as to be expected by Cotton Brokers, for we resolutely open it, for exactly which our Cotton must flow to the Government and the people. In the meantime, our new Consul in Corrientes has ably supported us in this matter, and we look forward with much anxiety to the arrival of the seed, which we have written for to the Cotton Supply Association, per Lord Brassey Ayres, which is now the vessel of the Argentine Republic, is specially adapted by the Cotton shipping people, which is encouraging, but not to be relied upon, and it is for us to do it in a national manner. The experiment is to be made in Corrientes, having good reasons, for such knowledge of the country being that the Consul might easily procure the proper hands for the work, whether here, per the Cotton Supply Association, or

EDITION FRANCAISE.

Octobre 12—1862.

Emmigration.

Dapres un travail récemment publié en Fran ce sur l'émigration jusques 1859 les départements des Hautes et Basses Pyrénées sont ceux qui fournissent le plus d'émigrants dont la presque totalité se dirige vers le Rio de la Plata. En 1857 de ces deux départements se sont expatriés comme colons 2721 individus et 1771 en 1858.

Comme ces faibles nombres ne donnent officiels, mais sont seulement le résultat de recherches faites par un particulier, il faut espérer qu'ils sont quelque peu affaiblis et que le nombre réel des émigrants qui nous viennent de ces départements est plus considérable que celui que nous venons d'indiquer. Il semble en effet que, des ports de Bayonne et de Bordeaux, il arrive chaque année à Buenos Aires plus de 2000 ou 3000 Basques Français, sans compter ceux qui s'engagent par l'Espagne. Néanmoins leur nombre est encore très-réduit, beaucoup trop réduit, surtout nous, et il y a lieu de retourner que ils ne se dirigent pas davantage vers un pays qui offre aux travailleurs et aussi peu aux grandes familles qui veulent.

Cela est un peu plus regrettable pour ces dernières, car, si les premiers ont plus de nerfs, ils n'ont pas comme eux de bras, et ce fait, dépourvu presque en pure partie des ressources nécessaires.

Jetons un rapide coup d'œil sur l'émigration au Brésil, nous y trouverons la confirmation de ce que nous venons de dire. Cette contrée offre cependant un double avantage, tout à fait semblable au climat de la France, et celui de la basse température qui règne toute l'année, et qui rend cette contrée si salubre. Elle offre encore un autre avantage, celui d'être, pour ainsi dire, un pays français, puisque la langue française y est généralement répandue.

Cependant, malgré ces deux avantages, l'émigration au Brésil, est encore moins importante que celle qui se dirige vers le Rio de la Plata. Pour ce dernier pays, en effet, il part chaque année, quelquefois, deux ou trois navires à la fois, tandis que pour le Brésil, il faut attendre longtemps, et souvent même on ne peut se procurer un vaisseau qui veuille se charger d'un petit nombre d'émigrants.

Les pays qui manquent de population doivent donc profiter de cet état de choses pour détourner à leur profit ces bras aujourd'hui sans emploi. Ils en tireront ainsi un même temps qu'ils soulageront des souffrances.

Le premier pays qui ait eu la force le courage de l'émigration a été la république des Etats Unis. Grâce à des lois libérales facilitant aux nouveaux venus l'acquisition à bas prix, de terres fertiles, grace aux compagnies organisées pour leur transport, leur navigation sur les fleuves, leur entretien pendant les premiers temps, les immigrants ont affluer et ont créé un puissant élément de la rapide prospérité de ce pays. La guerre actuelle a pu pris naissance à cette émigration que se portera particulièrement vers l'Amérique du Sud.

Rien n'égale l'activité, le Brésil, surtout depuis plus que nous avons déjà dit ses forts y des sociétés importantes y produisent un grand nombre d'immeubles. Mais les résultats atteints jusqu'ici sont loin d'être inférieurs, et si Pernambuco, qui n'était pas connue en Europe il y a quelques années, devient de plus en plus connu et est sérieusement répétée par tout le monde, c'est parce que cette ville a été, pendant la dernière guerre, le théâtre d'actes de courage, de dévouement et de patriotisme qui ont excité l'admiration des populations civilisées et que les révolutions si fréquentes il y a quelques années, deviennent de plus en plus rares et sont sérieusement réprimées par tout le monde.

Pernambuco est encore une ville très-active, où doit se faire par conséquent un grand mouvement d'affaires. Parmi les différentes villes du Brésil, c'est celle qui est le plus rapprochée de l'Europe, et qui, par conséquent, offre le plus d'avantages pour le commerce d'importation et d'exportation. Elle est aussi une des plus riches et des plus importantes par le chiffre de ses exportations. Elle est, en outre, la ville du Brésil où l'on trouve le plus de facilités pour la navigation à vapeur, et, par conséquent, la plus rapprochée de l'Europe.

Sans parler de la création de nouvelles colonies, on peut dire que si l'on veut développer dans le commerce et dans l'industrie, il faut y attirer des bras, il faut y amener des hommes qui, par leur travail, leur intelligence, leur activité, leur énergie, leur persévérance, leur économie, leur moralité, leur amour de l'ordre et de la famille, leur respect pour les lois, leur esprit de progrès, leur goût pour l'instruction, leur sentiment religieux, leur esprit de famille, leur esprit de famille, leur esprit de famille
